

BELKIN
CLERESTORY
WINDOWS

Shoulders will be brushed by sodden branches
yet to relinquish
their leaves.

It is likely planters will splatter
unable to contain the excess.
Roots will float
as they cannot draw it all in.

Ferns drooping
with water weight will recall their prehistoric ancestors.

Misty vapour will play hide and seek among the spiny roses while soft-bodied mites relocate spores
under moonlight.

Big leaf maples
will nurture licorice ferns in deep cushions of moss while their yellow leaves accumulate into a plush carpet
of decay.

Worms will appear seemingly out of nowhere
and all at once.
We anticipate patterns of introspection.
(Alejandra Morales)

Damp soil will swell
and crack open,
allowing nostrils
to flare. Anticipate the thickening of grey fur.
(Eleanor Panno)

There will be a period when acorns fall into warm beds of grass.
Squirrels eagerly await.

Arbutus trees will cast off
the last of their signature bark.
Children will pluck
wheat and pinch
stems between teeth.
(Jasmine Ruff)

Coyotes will dream
of slow rabbits
and fresh dew.
Buttercups will be held under chins
and questions
will be answered.
(Jasmine Ruff)

There is a chance of blooming dampness
on mute
concrete walls.
Algal stains spread slowly occupying
new terrain.

Immeasurable and microscopic transitions of colour
from stem to leaf can result in the pungent smell of switching
wardrobes.
(Hannah Möller)

Prepare for windfall!
In a dramatic reversal, hemlock roots will erupt into the sky.

We are calling for occasional whips
of mountain air
to scatter
magnolia leaves
on flagstones.
Exposed skin will bite against the tumbling,
silver air.
(Dora Prieto)

There will be periods of crows
on construction fencing. Expect cupped hands and blanketed ferns.
(Eleanor Panno)

The warm breath of voles will fill tunnels adorned with stalagmite roots.
Furry round ears
listen cautiously
for visiting canines.

Diffused light will reveal
blue-tinted footsteps
in the snow,
about to be brushed away
by pine tassels.
Veins of ivy stems
caught circulating
on stucco walls will anticipate the cover of waxy fluted leaves.

ARCHIVE WINDOW

Reverent pines
will create
untimely patches
of night.
Expect drops
in vitamin D
production.

CIRS WINDOWS

There will be a period when speckled leaves lean into milky brown puddles
to admire
their reflection.

Chance of leaf-logged gutters spilling over
onto roads.
Watch for dry sock mornings
and soaked-sock
afternoons.
(Eddie Chunn)

Red cedar roots will gradually wrap around
aging stumps
attempting to grip
the soil.

Stinkbugs will cling
to rubbery leaves,
while branches tickle
spongy concrete.
Expect hushed drips
to rebound
off the walls.
(Eleanor Panno)

The movement of air over the earth's surface
will resume
its exploration
of tree branches.
(Eddie Chunn)

A chain of mason bees
swaddled in cocoons will dream of a fattening
spring feast.

Sporadic silver
bearded wisps
may result in fallen foam
wrapped webs
and leaf dandruff.
(Hannah Möller)

Expect tumbling limbs and paths strewn
with evergreen.
High up
feathers will catch flight from an abandoned snag.

Frost will etch stillness
onto discarded leaves.
A turkey vulture
circles, sights
unhindered by foliage.
(Dora Prieto)
